"You cannot change any society unless you take responsibility for it, unless you see yourself as belonging to it and responsible for changing it." ~ Grace Lee Boggs

FY21 did not disappoint when it came to adapting to constant change. Yet, as I reflected on my first year navigating the COVID-19 pandemic, our team did not lose focus on getting talent back to work, supporting children impacted by parental incarceration, and helping women prepare to return home to their families after incarceration. I am grateful for the opportunity to lead and work with a group of people who embody mission-alignment every day.

As irony would have it, I might even argue that we became an even better agency because of it!

- We updated our website with a timeline that helps tell our almost five-decade journey.
- We made it easier for employers to learn about second chance employment on our website.
- Our Greater Charlotte Pathways Home event began a strategic partnership with SHRM Foundation's Getting Talent Back to Work initiative.
- We evaluated our Families Doing Time social emotional learning curriculum as a proactive step toward addressing the long-term impacts of COVID-19 on academic achievement.
- We added dedicated behavioral health staff at our Center for Women residential work release dorm!

The world has undoubtedly changed and 'normal' will continue to be redefined in real time for the foreseeable future.

Our FY21 results remind me that when we see ourselves as belonging to the communities that we serve and we take collective responsibility for enabling systemic change, we can turn negative outcomes to transformative ones for the millions of people and families impacted by incarceration.

Beginning October 2020, in light of the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic's impact on direct instruction in schools, and the correlation to inequitable academic outcomes for students that experience incarceration in the home, CCT began the development of an expanded Enrichment Institute social emotional and literacy based academic model (aligned to the CASEL framework) to directly address unfinished learning during and after the COVID-19 pandemic for children enrolled in our program.
